

Ear, Nose and Throat

Steven D Handler, MD, MBE

There are many ways in which 22Q deletion syndrome can affect the ears, nose and throat of your child. These include hearing issues, ear infections and voice abnormalities, among many others. This presentation is designed to familiarize you with the types of problems that can appear and how to best collaborate with your otolaryngologist (ear, nose and throat specialist) to look for and manage these concerns.